

SIOA Mosque Manifesto: All Mosques are Not Created Equal, A Handy Guide to Fighting the Muslim Brotherhood

Sioa towers

As we have been reminded time after time after grisly Islamic terror plots have been exposed, there is always a mosque, and the imprimatur of a cleric, behind every operation.

Controversy Surrounds Construction of Mosques Across U.S.

We have seen communities take action in Staten Island; Sheepshead Bay, Brooklyn; Rutherford County, Murfreesboro, Tennessee (where mosque opponents have scheduled a petition march for July 14); and Wisconsin.

They're separated by thousands of miles, but they share a common controversy: Mosques. Murfreesboro, Tenn., has joined a growing list of midsized towns in the U.S. that are embroiled in conflicts over proposed mosques being built or bought in their neighborhoods. Including Murfreesboro, residents have risen up against mosques in two other Tennessee towns; in Staten Island, N.Y.; Sheboygan County, Wis.; and the Sheepshead Bay neighborhood of Brooklyn, as well as the proposed mosque and Islamic Cultural Center near Ground Zero, which has garnered some of the most heated battles. A new Quinnipiac Poll shows that well over half of New Yorkers – 52 percent oppose building a mosque near the 9/11 site. Only 31 percent support it. Among ethnic groups, Hispanics show the greatest opposition to the Ground Zero mosque, 60 to 19 percent. Among religious groups, Jews and white Catholics expressed the greatest opposition, both at 66 percent.

I have created (with the help of Robert Spencer, of course) a handy guide for folks across America who find themselves faced with a huge monster mosque proposal in their small towns. Robert and I will happily assist in research and direction. Meanwhile, here is a step-by-step guide to how you should proceed.

1. Find out who and what the players are. The vast majority of mosques are backed by groups that are linked to the Muslim Brotherhood, the group that is dedicated to “eliminating and destroying Western civilization from within.” Mosques with jihadist, terror ties must be fought fiercely and defeated. Look for connections to the Muslim American Society, the Islamic Society of North America, the North American Islamic Trust, the Islamic Circle of North America, the Muslim Student Association, and other Brotherhood-linked groups. The dossier on the stealth jihadists at CAIR, ICNA, ISNA, MAS, etc., are in the evidence presented at the Holy Land terror trials. Check the group affiliations of the mosque organizers against the list of Brotherhood groups on page 18 of this document, page 32 of the pdf. Usually this is public and easily obtainable information, since despite their Brotherhood connections these groups are still regarded as “moderate” and wholly benign by most law enforcement and government officials. Nonetheless, if the mosque is indeed a Brotherhood-linked entity, notify local reporters, and persist. If they ignore the story, ask them why they're not following up on this link between the mosque organizers and the Brotherhood, the parent group of Hamas and Al-Qaeda.

If none of the groups behind your mosque are on the list, find out as much as you can about the groups that are involved: it is part of the Brotherhood's strategy in the U.S. to create a dizzying array of groups, so that organizational affiliations are obscured and links to unsavory groups and individuals be easily denied; however, often there is a great deal of personnel overlap between various Islamic groups, and so connections can be established.

Also find out as much as you can about the mosque's imam and other leaders, if any. Often imams with "moderate" reputations are anything but. Take, for example, the Imam Anwar al-Awlaki. He was the go-to Muslim cleric for reporters scrambling to explain Islam after 9/11; yet it turned out that he was the same imam who guided the 9/11 Muslim attackers to commit jihad. Al-Awlaki was the "spiritual adviser" to three of the hijackers who attacked America on Sept 11, 2001. He guided the 9/11 jihadis, the Fort Hood Major Muslim, and the Christmas balls bomber. He was the imam at the respected Dar al Hijrah mosque while being the go-to Muslim for big media for information on Islam. Exactly like how the un-indicted co-conspirator, Hamas-linked CAIR's leaders are the go-to guys for media now.

Imams matter.

Be sure to check out not just the organizers, but who is being brought in to speak. A mosque could have no discernible or public connections to the Brotherhood, but then bring in to speak someone like Siraj Wahhaj (a "potential unindicted co-conspirator" in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing case) or Ingrid Mattson (leader of the Hamas-linked Islamic Society of North America).

2. Check on the sources of their funding. This information will most likely be harder to come by, and that should give you an opportunity to ask questions, and to ask the local media why they aren't asking questions. Most mosques in America are Saudi-funded and stocked with Islamic supremacist Saudi literature. Ask mosque leaders, if they aren't forthcoming about the sources of their funding, what they have to hide. Call for funding transparency. And if they admit to Saudi funding, ask them what assurances they can give the community that Saudi Wahhabi Islamic supremacism, with its contempt for non-Muslims and desire to subjugate them, will not be taught at the mosque.

3. Call for a full curriculum review, access to reading lists, etc. The mosque and/or the Islamic school's curriculum, as well as its funding, should be transparent: as Ayn Rand said, "Honest people are never touchy about the matter of being trusted."

The Mapping Sharia project found that three out of four mosques preach hate and incitement to violence — and that includes the last (chronologically) and most authoritative chapter of the Koran on jihad — chapter nine, Repentance. This corroborates the testimony of the Muslim Sheikh Muhammad Hisham Kabani before a State Department Open Forum in January 1999. Kabani said that 80% of American mosques were controlled by "extremists." Also, the Center for Religious Freedom report in 2005 found that hatred of Jews and Christians and Islamic supremacism were extensively taught in American mosques.

Those are the only surveys of what mosques in America teach that anyone has ever undertaken, and they all agree. Supporters of mosque construction can't point to any competing studies that claim to show that mosques in America teach pluralism, free speech, love for non-Muslims, equality for women, etc. There aren't any.

The Islamic Saudi Academy (ISA) in Virginia used textbooks that called for jihad and called Jews apes and Christians pigs. The U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom's report criticized ISA textbooks for stating that it was permissible for Muslims to kill converts from Islam and adulterers. The results of this teaching are obvious: former ISA valedictorian Ahmed Omar Abu Ali was convicted in federal court of joining Al-Qaeda and plotting to assassinate President George W. Bush. And former ISA student Mohammed El-Yacoubi was carrying a suicide note and was believed to be planning a suicide bombing attack in Israel.

And check out the proposed reading list ties sponsor of proposed huge Tennessee Islamic facility To Global Muslim Brotherhood — read it all here.

The website of the Islamic Center of Murfreesboro (ICM) says it "is not in any way associated or affiliated with any outside organization locally, nationally, internationally or any other way. However, the ICM reading list suggests, at the least, an ideological affiliation with the US Muslim Brotherhood and includes works by the following authors":

Yusuf Al-Qaradawi (Global Muslim Brotherhood leader)

Harun Yahya (Turkish "creationist" known for anti-Semitic writings and heavily promoted by the GMB)

Ahmad Sakr (important figure in early history of the USMB)

Jamal Badawi (USMB leader)

Akbar Ahmed (Pakistani American close to USMB)

Hassan Hathout (deceased leader of the Islamic Center of Southern Ca with likely background in the Egyptian MB)

Ahmad Von Denffer (German Muslim Brotherhood)

Taha Jabir (likely Taha Al-Alwani International Institute of Islamic Thought (IIIT))

John Esposito (Georgetown academic and longtime USMB supporter)

It should be noted that the ICM book list also features "Silent No More", the work of ex-Congressman Paul Findley, a long-time harsh critic of Israel and a supporter of the Council on American Islamic Relations (CAIR), an important part of the US Muslim Brotherhood. Mr. Findley appeared at a 2006 press conference at the World Assembly of Muslim Youth (WAMY) headquarters in Saudi Arabia to support a CAIR initiative.

The ICM also has reported that is sponsored a January 2009 protest against the Israeli "war on Gaza."

4. Research zoning laws, parking laws, traffic laws, etc. The best advice is to assemble a team in your neighborhood to start researching. While this is being done — play the bureaucrats' game. Check zoning, traffic codes, etc. If there is rezoning involved, fight it. If there are some changes to codes, fight them. Keep it tied up. Exhaust them. While the bureaucrat brigade is attacking that flank, research the people and the funding. Try to find pro bono lawyers in your town who understand the problem. If there are none who understand it, make a presentation to lawyers who will listen — giving them facts, not emotion. Robert and I will come to your town and help you in this if need be.

At the end of the day, our government is only there to protect us. They steal the rest for their own political purpose, but the point, the goal, the reason for government is to protect our individual rights. Government = force, and if the Muslim Brotherhood intends to open a satellite HQ in your town or neck of the woods, it is up to the government, once presented with the facts, to protect its citizens from Islamic supremacists and jihadism. It could be up to you to present them with those facts. Be ready.
